Q.1 Read the leaflet, then answer the questions below. 15 points

The www project

Introducing the project

You're going to create a young people's website with a worldwide perspective. Your task is to present your thoughts and ideas about the four subject areas, their role in your lives, now and in the future. You can include texts, photos, video, sound, pictures, interviews, monologues - whatever you choose. When the website goes live, young people around the world will be able to access the material, respond to it and add to it.

Pairs of teams will create each subject area. You'll be assigned your area and your partner team in our first session. This leaflet gives you advice about good working practices that you should try to use during the project.

Team leaders - important people!

You have already shown that you can work as a team. Now there will be eight of you working together and you could be on different sides of the world. Team leaders must play an essential role in project co-ordination.

• Only team leaders should request information from another team. Requests from different team members for similar information could cause confusion and extra work.

• Make sure you copy your leader into emails that you send so that he or she knows what is going on.

• It's a good idea to hold regular review meetings and team leaders should organise these.

Working with your partner team

You'll have just one day in New York for discussion and planning - so make the most of it.

• Plan thoroughly. Don't be afraid to change your plan later if it's not working out but do discuss it and do be aware of deadlines. At a certain point, it will be too late to make changes and you will have to stick with what you've got.

• If you hold a video or phone conference, try to be there as a group so you all share in ideas and problem-solving.

• Use an appropriate form of contact at the right time - don't phone another team when it's the middle of their night.

Your project supervisor will monitor your progress and give you help and advice if you encounter difficulties or fall behind. Technical support is available from Georgi and the other design and maintenance staff of the project website. Remember to back everything up.

Do share information with your team - this is a group project. Don't go off doing your own thing - it's all about teamwork. Do try to respond to requests from other teams promptly. Don't make changes to plans without talking to your partner team first. Do speak to your project supervisor if you find the workload too much. Don't panic - there's a solution to every problem. Do enjoy it - make friends, make discoveries, have fun!

Good luck! You have several months to complete the work and then it will take several weeks to set up the website. When the website is launched, all the material you have created will be accessible all around the world!
