Aaron 'Wheelz' Fotheringham

Aaron Fotheringham was born with a disease which made walking impossible. However, by the time he was four, he had learnt to get around on crutches. A few years later, he left the crutches behind and began using a wheelchair. He and his brother Brian soon became a regular sight on the streets of their neighbourhood in Las Vegas, Aaron in his wheelchair and Brian on his BMX.

One life-changing day, the boys had just arrived at the local skate park when Brian had an idea. Perhaps his brother could try one of the ramps in his chair. Aaron accepted the challenge. On his first attempt he fell, but he was determined to succeed, so he tried again. At the end of the day, he realised he had found a sport that he loved. He called it wheelchair motocross (WCMX).

Aaron started out as an amateur athlete, entering BMX competitions and posting his videos online. At the time, he was working on a new trick. His dedication paid off when he eventually managed to do a backflip. No one had ever done that in a wheelchair before! A few years later, 'Wheelz', as he was now known, set another record: the first ever double backflip. In 2010, Aaron turned professional and joined the action sports show Nitro Circus Live. While he was performing in Brazil in 2012, he successfully jumped a fifteen-metre gap. Four years later, the Brazilians were cheering him on again. This time Aaron was there to open the Rio Paralympics.

Though he has suffered a few injuries, Aaron takes safety very seriously. Through his passion, he wants to change the way the world thinks about people in wheelchairs, and to inspire everyone, disabled or not, to overcome their own challenges.
