Q.1 Read the text, then answer the questions below. 20 points

Switch it off! It's bad for your brain!

'Stop staring at that screen! It's bad for you! Switch it off!' Parents have been telling teenagers things like that for years. But is tech really bad for your brain?

Maybe so. After all, it's true that technology causes sleep disorders. The blue light from screens stops you from sleeping and a lack of sleep means you feel stressed and depressed and find it harder to concentrate. Technology may also cause memory loss. I read recently that millennials* are more forgetful than the over-55s. Apparently, too much information and constant interruptions prevent our short-term working memories from becoming permanent long-term memories. Now, what was I saying? What's more, the internet has become our brain's external hard drive: Why memorise anything when you can find it online? Why remember directions when you have GPS?

However, don't throw away your phone and tablet yet. Technology's not all bad. It offers a world of information at the touch of a screen. In addition, it provides stimulation and variety, and that's good for your brain. Millennials may have more distractions, but we're also way better at multi-tasking.

To sum up, technology is like salt. It's good in moderation. You can't live without it but too much can harm you.
