Q.1 Read Susan's recount, then answer the questions below. 8 points

Dad's favourite walk

My dad used to live in Switzerland and he worked as a mountain guide. This summer Dad wanted to visit Switzerland again. In July I travelled to the mountains with Mum, Dad and my twin brother Fred. We stayed in a hotel in a little village and we had a great time.

One day Dad took us on his favourite walk. First, we followed a narrow path through a meadow. There were lots of flowers and there were goats with bells round their necks. They tinkled when the goats moved. After that, the path went through a forest. It was shady and quiet. It reminded me of Red Riding Hood but I didn't see a wolf! After the forest, the path climbed steeply towards the mountain peaks.

We walked into a deep, narrow ravine. We could hear the river splashing over the rocks at the bottom. While we were walking, we heard a distant roar. Gradually, it got louder. We walked round a massive boulder and there was the most amazing sight. Water was falling straight down the mountain and crashing onto the rocks below us.

The sound was incredible. A waterfall really does roar. It sounded like an angry beast. Dad beckoned to us and we followed him. The path led behind the waterfall. I thought it was fantastic but it was a bit scary, too.

Round the corner the path stopped at the edge of a high cliff. There was a short wooden bridge with rope at the sides and it was swinging in the breeze. It looked terrifying but Dad knew it was safe. We walked slowly to keep steady. Fred and I thought it was fun but Dad had to help Mum. She is frightened of high places. She walked with her eyes shut!

We sat on the rocks and ate our lunch. After an hour our legs were aching but at last we came to the best place on the whole mountain. It was a huge glacier and it looked like a frozen river of ice. There was a cave in the ice. There were rooms in the cave and ice furniture. Fred sat on the ice chair and played the ice piano. It was funny!

The last surprise of all was a ride down to the hotel on the little mountain train. We were exhausted but it was a brilliant walk. (Susan)
