Q.1 Read the story, then answer the questions below. — 8 points

Danger at the old house

On Jack's birthday, Uncle Ted gave him a fishing rod. Uncle Ted took Jack and his sister Mary to the river. They fished all day, but they didn't see any fish and none of them caught anything.

The next day, the weather was cloudy and dull. The stream looked grey and gloomy. They set up their rods and began fishing. But still no one caught a single fish. "I can't understand it," said Uncle Ted. "The stream should be full of fish this early on in the season."

Jack looked upstream. In the distance, he saw an old building. It was built across the water. "What's that building?" he asked. "It was a ruin until a few months ago," said Uncle Ted. "Then a man called Sid Scrub and his brother, Harry, bought it. Now it's a small factory where material is hand-dyed. They say that Sid Scrub and his brother are not very nice. They have bad tempers!"

Jack looked at the building through his binoculars. "Can Mary and I go and have a look?" he asked. "You don't want to bump into Sid Scrub, do you?" "We'll be very careful," said Mary. "All right," said Uncle Ted. "But you must not go too near the building. Do you promise?" "Yes, we promise," said Jack and Mary.

They set off along the bank towards the old building. All the windows had wooden boards over them. There were lots of tiles missing from the roof and weeds grew out of gaps in the walls. Someone had put barbed wire along the top of the fence and nailed a large 'Keep out!' sign to the wall. The gate was locked with a heavy padlock.

Mary walked carefully down to the water's edge and peered under the old building. She saw that the water flowed underneath it and through a heavy, iron grid. The grid looked old and rusty. Suddenly she let out a gasp of horror. There, trapped behind the grid, were lots of dead fish. Mary shuddered. "How terrible! Those poor fish! They're all dead, aren't they?" "Shh!" whispered Jack. "Someone's coming this way!"

"I tell you Sid," said a voice. "I saw some kids." "I can't see any kids here, Harry," said Sid. "You must have imagined it. Everything will be fine. Now stop making such a fuss." After the door had banged shut, Jack let out a sigh of relief. "I don't like this place at all," said Mary. "There's something very bad happening here."
