Q.1 Read the three advertisements, then answer the questions below. 15 points

Persuasion

We're having a festival!

We think it's a great idea, too! It's happening in July this year. And you can join in - even if you haven't got a big nose and funny eyes. We need volunteers to: sell programmes, look after visitors, act as guides, run the information points. Can you help? This is what to do: Find out about the festival on the school website and decide what you'd like to do. Download an application form and fill it in - easy! Completed forms must be received by 14th January. (The Festival Organising Group)

You wouldn't wear boots to go running, would you? Make the choice. Aether

"Always my choice." Ben Hill, Olympic athlete. Aether trainers from the Carlton Shoe Company $200-$250. Order online at www.carltonshoes.org

Now you really can save the planet.

You may know that carbon (CO_2) emissions are creating the greenhouse gas effect. It may surprise you to know that deforestation affects the planet more than the carbon emissions from every plane, car, truck, ship and train on the planet combined. Forests are carbon sinks. They absorb carbon and help to control the global climate, but 80% of the world's forests have already been damaged or destroyed. Each year more than 13 million hectares of forests disappear, an area roughly as big as England.

If we want to limit emissions and survive climate change, the destruction has to stop. Without healthy, thriving forests, planet Earth cannot sustain life. They are home to 80% of all terrestrial biodiversity. Tropical forests should be seen as one of the greatest storehouses of nature's diversity on Earth: of all of the world's land species, around two thirds live in forests. Many of these rare creatures - orang-utans, tigers, jaguars, forest elephants and rhinos - are increasingly threatened by extinction.

If we want to keep these animals and others, the destruction has to stop. Forests are essential to civilisations and crucial for economic development. They offer access to water, agricultural productivity, energy, soil conservation and flood control. Over 1.6 billion people worldwide - that's nearly a quarter of the current world population - depend on forest resources for their livelihoods and many rely on forests for food, shelter and water.

If we want to help people live in their forest communities, the destruction has to stop. 2011 was declared by the United Nations as the International Year of the Forest. Let's go forward from there. International Forests works to preserve existing forests throughout the world and plant new ones. Donate now to International Forests' worldwide projects and stop the destruction.
