Q.1 Read the text, then answer the questions below. 12 points

The Greatest Gift of Life

Two women are sitting in a café together. They're drinking coffee and sharing a piece of chocolate cake. One woman is talking. The other woman is listening carefully. The first woman seems sad. She starts crying. The other woman doesn't speak; she just hands her companion a tissue. The first woman stops crying and smiles.

According to psychologists, we get on with people who share the same background, opinions, interests, personality and even physical appearance. People with glasses often sit next to other people with glasses. The saying that 'opposites attract' appears not to be true. If you love sport, your friends probably love sport too.

Good friends are fun to be with but they're hard to find. It's true you can make lots of contacts on social media, but are they real friends or just acquaintances? Can you be open with them? Can you rely on them? Sometimes we don't even know if an online 'friend' is a real person or someone with a fake identity.

True friendships last for a lifetime, but to have a real friendship you need to do things together and share your feelings and opinions. Studies show that true friendship survives even when friends are in different countries. But only if you keep in touch. If you don't, friendships can die.

An old proverb tells us that 'a friend in need is a friend indeed'. That means you can tell who your real friends are when you're in trouble. Real friends stay with you and help you when you need them. They never let you down or turn their back on you.

Finally, what's the difference between a good friend and your best friend? Well, a good friend knows about your life; your best friend lives your life with you. Best friends know what you're thinking and how you feel. You don't have to pretend when you're with your best friend; you can be yourself.
