Q.1 Read the debate speeches, then answer the questions below. 13 points

Bay City College Debating Competition

Motion: This house believes that the arts are essential in the school curriculum

Tasha Simms (Proposer)

I propose this motion because the arts are central to human creativity. They are a common language that enables communication between the peoples of the world and across cultures. They belong in the school curriculum and I'm going to put forward two important reasons for this.

The first is that the arts are not just about learning to paint pictures or play the piano: they are about creative thinking. The world needs creative thinkers. The ability to express and explore new ideas, to analyse, and to think critically are creative skills that are fundamental to the arts.

My second point is that the creative skills learned in the arts transfer readily to other subjects in the school curriculum. The fact is that many careers require creative skills. What use is a designer, an engineer or an architect who can only re-create what already exists? What use is an economist or a business executive who cannot conceive new plans and innovative schemes? I therefore propose the motion and I urge you to support it.

Kurt Asper (Opposer)

I oppose the motion because we do indeed live in a real world. We need to manage the planet and its resources, not to write music or stories about it. The arts have nothing to do with progress.

The first point I must make is that students need a firm grounding in the knowledge that already exists. Education is based on learning. We don't want to waste time re-inventing the wheel! There simply isn't space in the curriculum to accommodate subjects that can be done out of school in students' own time.

Secondly, I must tell you that the other 'serious' subjects such as maths and science are more important and more useful to students. There is no getting away from it; ambitious students need to pass core exams. Writing poems won't help; singing songs won't help.

Even though I must concede that useful skills may be learned through the practice of the arts, they can also be learned through the study of science and maths. Education is simply too important to squander it on activities that aren't going to help students to get on in the world so I urge you to oppose the motion.
